

Exercise walk-through

Westward Expansion: Social and Cultural Development ■ 6.3

eXercise

You must be able to

- state what migrants hoped to achieve and the opportunities they sought
- name the three groups competing for land and resources
- state what the U.S. government did
- state what many American Indians did despite assimilation policies

Method — Migrants' hopes

In hopes of achieving ideals of self-sufficiency and independence, migrants moved to both rural and boomtown areas of the West for opportunities, such as building the railroads, mining, farming, and ranching.

Method — Three groups

As migrant populations increased in number and the American bison population was decimated, competition for land and resources in the West among white settlers, American Indians, and Mexican Americans led to an increase in violent conflict. The bison's destruction is given as part of the cause.

Method — Government action

The U.S. government violated treaties with American Indians and responded to resistance with military force, eventually confining American Indians to reservations and denying tribal sovereignty. Four actions, stated plainly.

Method — Preservation

Many American Indians preserved their cultures and tribal identities despite government policies promoting assimilation, and they attempted to develop self-sustaining economic practices. The CED records action as well as what was done.
