

can

English A1

What this topic teaches can is the little verb of ability , permission and requests . Chinese has , and for these jobs; English packs them into one word.

- Ability: I can swim.
- Permission: Can I go now?
- Requests: Can you help me?
- The best news in the whole course: can never changes. No -s for he, no past dance, no nothing. I can, you can, she can, they can. After the ego letter of topic 7, can is a holiday.

The forms: one word for everyone

	Form	Example
statement	can + base verb	She can speak three languages.
negative	cannot / can't	He can't swim.
question	Can + person + verb?	Can you cook?

- △ The verb after can is always the base form: can swim, never “can to swim”, never “can swims”. can does all the grammar work, so the next verb relaxes completely.
- cannot is written as one word. Can't is the spoken short form.
- Short answers: Can you swim? – Yes, I can. / No, I can't. Just can, no verb needed.

Three jobs, one word

Job	Question	Meaning
ability	Can you swim?	Do you know how?
permission	Can I borrow this?	Is it allowed?
request	Can you help me?	Please do it.

- The same sentence can do two jobs: Can I open the window? asks permission, and only you know if the room is hot.
- Register : Can I...? is neutral and friendly. Could I...? is more polite and arrives in A2. Teachers and grandmothers prefer the polite version; your classmates accept can.
- △ Traditional teachers may insist may is for permission. May I go? is very formal – good for exams and palaces, stiff for the playground.

Watch out: traps for Chinese speakers

- △ No to. is one piece, so “can to speak” sneaks in. English: can speak. The base verb only.
- △ No -s, ever. “She cans swim” – the one day the ego letter takes off, don't invite it back. She can swim.
- △ can has no future form. “I will can” ×. The future of can is will be able to: After this course, I will be able to speak English. File it away for later.
- △ Huì means two things: a learned skill (I can swim) and a prediction (= “it will rain tomorrow”). English can covers only the skill. For predictions, English uses will – an A2 topic that is already looking forward to meeting you.

Say it aloud

A truth-telling game: three abilities, one lie. Your partner guesses the lie.

- I can ride a bike. I can cook noodles. I can speak a little English – and a lot of sarcasm.
- I can't dance. I have certificates in not dancing.
- Can you play any instrument? – Yes, I can. The triangle . It is still an instrument.

Answer first, then read the explanation.

1. She ____ swim. (ability) – can. One word for every person; no -s, no changes.
2. Can you ____ (to help / help) me? – help. After can, the base form only.
3. Question for permission to leave: – Can I go now? Flip can to the front.
4. He can't ____ (dance / dances). – dance. can does the grammar work; the verb relaxes.
5. After this course, I ____ speak English. (future ability) – will be able to. can has no future form; it retires at tomorrow.
