朝 vs 向 vs 往 (towards)

■ A model for learning is an abstract target

- You want to learn from an experienced teammate.
- 我向他学习。 – 向 introduces the person used as a model for learning.

■ Build the form

- The pattern in this lesson is 朝 vs 向 vs 往 (towards). Locate it in the original interlinear examples below.
- Keep the words in their demonstrated positions; the pattern must fit the intended situation as well as the sentence form.

我们向他学习。

wǒ men xiàng tā xué xí

Word guide: 我们 – we; 向 – toward; 他 – him; 学习 – learn.

■ Read examples in context

一直往前走。

yì zhí wǎng qián zǒu

Word guide: 一直 – straight; 往 – toward; 前 – forward; 走 – walk.

- In the opening example, 我向他学习。: 向 introduces the person used as a model for learning.
- Explain who acts, what is described and which time or group is relevant before choosing an English paraphrase.

■ Know the boundary

- 朝, 向 and 往 overlap for physical direction, but not every abstract collocation.
- Learn 向 ... 学习 instead of freely swapping every towards-word.

■ Use the distinction

- 向 introduces the person used as a model for learning.
- 朝, 向 and 往 overlap for physical direction, but not every abstract collocation. Learn 向 ... 学习 instead of freely swapping every towards-word.

■ Try it with help closed

You want to learn from an experienced teammate. Close the examples. Say a Mandarin response, then write it in Chinese. Explain briefly in English what the lesson's pattern adds. Compare with the model, then change one detail and try again.

One possible response: 我向他学习。

- My response conveys a message that fits the opening situation.
- I can explain the meaning of the pattern, rather than only naming it.
- 朝, 向 and 往 overlap for physical direction, but not every abstract collocation.
- Learn 向 ... 学习 instead of freely swapping every towards-word.
- I tried a second response with a name, time, place, or description changed.
