

Comparing similar adverbs

Ref Hsk3 Grammar

才 vs 就 — “late / hard” vs “early / easy”

These two adverbs are a matched pair pulling in opposite directions. Both sit before the verb after a time or condition, but 才 says something happened later or with more effort than expected (often a touch impatient), while 就 says it happened sooner or more easily than expected.

{zh: 老板 |lǎo bǎn|the boss / 十一点 |shí yī diǎn|eleven / 才 |cái|not until / 到 |dào|arrived / 。 }

The boss didn't get in until eleven.

{zh: 他 |tā|he / 六点 |liù diǎn|six / 就 |jiù|already / 到 |dào|arrived / 了 |le / 。 }

He was already here by six.

Remember: 才 drags late (no 了); 就 jumps early (+ 了). A neat tell: the 了 lines up with 就 (“already happened, 就到了”) and avoids 才 (“late, nothing tidily completed, 才到”).

Watch out

- 才 = slower / later / harder than expected (sometimes annoyed); 就 = faster / earlier / easier.
- The verb after 才 takes no 了; 就 in the “already” sense usually does.

刚 vs 刚才 — adverb vs time word

Same “just,” two different word-classes. 刚 is an adverb (“just,” sitting right before the verb); 刚才 is a time noun (“a moment ago,” roughly the last 1–30 minutes) that can stand on its own and even modify a noun.

{zh: 老板 |lǎo bǎn|the boss / 刚 |gāng|just / 走 |zǒu|left / 。 }

The boss just left.

{zh: 你 |nǐ|you / 刚才 |gāng cái|just now / 说 |shuō|said / 什么 |shén me|what / 了 |le / ? }

What did you just say?

Remember: 刚 = adverb, glued to the verb (刚到); 刚才 = noun, free-standing (刚才的事, “the thing just now”). 刚 often skips 了 when the verb already carries a result; 刚才 is firmly past and pairs with 了.

Watch out

- Before an adjective, only 刚 / 刚刚 works: 天刚晴 (“the sky just cleared”) — never 刚才晴.

有点 vs 一点 — “a bit too” vs “a little (more)”

Both translate as “a bit,” but they sit on opposite sides of the adjective and carry opposite moods. 有点 (儿) goes before an adjective with a hint of complaint (“a bit too ...”); 一点 (儿) goes after an adjective to mark a small amount or degree (in comparisons or requests).

{zh: 今天 |jīn tiān|today / 我 |wǒ|I’m / 有点 |yǒu diǎn|a bit / 累 |lèi|tired / 。 }

I’m a bit tired today.

{zh: 请 |qǐng|please / 说 |shuō|speak / 慢 |màn|slowly / 一点 |yì diǎn|a little / 。 }

Please speak a little more slowly.

Remember: 有点 + Adj = a grumble before (“a bit too tired”); Adj + 一点 = a measured amount after (“a little slower”). Position tells you the mood: before = complaint, after = neutral nudge.

Watch out

- 一点 + Noun = “a little (of)”: 一点水, 一点钱 — 有点 can’t do this.
- 一点也不 / 一点也没 = “not at all”: 一点也不辣.

再 vs 又 — future vs past “again”

Both mean “again,” but they split cleanly on time: 再 is “again” for something not yet done (a future or intended repeat); 又 is “again” for something that has already happened.

{zh: 欢迎 |huān yíng|welcome / 再 |zài|again / 来 |lái|come / ! }

Come again!

{zh: 你 |nǐ|you / 又 |yòu|again / 迟到 |chí dào|late / 了 |le / 。 }

You’re late again.

Remember: 再 looks forward (plan/intend, no 了); 又 looks back (already repeated, usually + 了). 欢迎再来 (please come again) vs 你又来了 (here you are again). The 了 sides with 又.

Watch out

- 再 also means “another” (再来一个) and “(do A) then (B)” (先 ... 再 ...); 又 also stacks qualities (又高又帅).